

Hippies were young people, mostly from the middle classes, who rebelled against society.

Their lifestyle shocked their parents. Hippies left their comfortable middle-class homes and lived in communes, often in the country. They went to open-air pop concerts, where some of them danced naked and took drugs. They went on protest marches against war. (There was a very bad war going on in Vietnam.)

They were against many things: materialism in society, the boring routine of nine-to-five jobs, ordinary family life, and war. Their slogan was „Make love, not war.“

For old people (the World-War-II-generation) it was also shocking how they looked: Boys and girls had very long hair, often with flowers in it. Sometimes they went barefoot.

Today the hippies have become grandmothers and grandfathers. They live middle-class-lives and worry about their pensions and their grandchildren and about changing times.

If you're ..... San Francisco, be sure to wear some ..... in your hair. sicher

If you're going to San Francisco, you're gonna ..... some gentle people there. you are going to (Futur)

All those ..... come to San Francisco, summertime will be a love-in .....

In the ..... of San Francisco, gentle people with flowers in ..... hair. liebenswertig, sanft

All ..... the nation, such a strange vibration,
..... in motion, Bewegung
there's a ..... generation, with a new explanation, Erklärung

people in motion, people in motion. Bewegung

All..... who come to San Francisco, be sure ..... some flowers in your hair.

If you ..... to San Francisco,
..... will be a love-in there.

Translate:

1. Sie trägt einige Blumen in ihrem Haar. ....
.....
2. Gehst du nach San Francisco? (ing-Form).....
.....
3. Wir werden einige nette Leute treffen. ....
.....
4. Du kannst eine ganze Generation antreffen. ....
.....
5. Die Leute auf der Straße sind in Bewegung .....
.....